Why the NLRB Matters

Corporate America and their Republican allies in the Senate are trying to kill the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB).

The NLRB is the federal agency for protecting workers’ rights, and corporate America knows it. That’s why they’ve waged a five year campaign to destroy the NLRB.

Take the case of Robert Cummings, father of two, worked as a broadcast engineer at CNN.

Cummings and 110 other technicians lost their jobs when CNN created a phony organization, just to get rid of union-represented employees.

The NLRB investigated and ruled against CNN. The NLRB ordered immediate reinstatement for Cummings, and 110 co-workers, full back pay, and negotiation with NABET-CWA.

CNN challenged the decision, questioning the legal authority of the NLRB that ruled against them.

In the meantime, Cummings went into debt, lost his house, and suffered health issues from stress.

We need a functioning NLRB to bring justice for Cummings and the 110 former CNN workers.
