

CWA Occupational Safety and Health Bill of Rights Campaign: Introduction

The Union's Occupational Safety and Health Department has developed the "CWA Occupational Safety and Health Bill of Rights Campaign." This effort points out the workplace safety and health rights that CWA members are provided by federal law, targets the dismal record of the Bush Administration to provide workers with adequate workplace safety and health protections, and highlights John Kerry's excellent record on occupational safety and health issues.

The Union's campaign is intended to be used by CWA leaders and occupational safety and health activists as a tool to recruit greater numbers of local union safety and health activists, as well as working to defeat the Bush Administration's re-election efforts in November 2004.

The Union's Bill of Rights educational material consists of:

- >> The CWA Occupational Safety and Health Bill of Rights Campaign: Introduction
- >> The CWA Occupational Safety and Health Bill of Rights: Background Information
- >> Fact sheets elaborating upon information presented in each of the featured bullets in the Bill of Rights and
- >> Kerry-Bush records on Occupational Safety and Health.

CWA's Occupational Safety and Health Department will distribute the Bill of Rights materials via e-mail and will post the information on our webpage. In turn, the Union's leaders and members and occupational safety and health activists are encouraged to copy and use these materials in their safety and health activities.
